SWEET MELODY FLOUR.

It is doubtful if the Kansas farmers can be influenced by tariff revision talk unless it can be shown that revision would bring in a still finer quality of automobiles.

A cold is much more easily cured when the bowels are open. Kennedy's Laxative Honey and Tar opens the bowels and drives the cold out of the system in young or old. Sold by Stone & Mercer.

SWEET MELODY FLOUR.

Discussing pistols as dueling weapons, the Paris Figaro sought the views of a man who had the reputation of an expert on the field of honor. He at once began to rail at duels with pistols. He could not bear even to speak of them. The fact was that he had once himself at an encounter of that kind received a ball in the shoulder.

"Then you disapprove of them simply because you were defeated?"
"Why, I was not defeated."
"What?"

"No, I was a second. You may well believe that I promised myself never to mix again in affairs of that sort. However, one day I had to accompany a friend on the field. He had asked if I could not lend him a pistol. I could not refuse. But I insisted upon one condition."

"What was that?"
"That I should climb a tree during the firing."

"A good scheme."
"You think so? Well, I was wounded again. My friend fired in the air."

Soldiers in Battle.
"It is important to be cool and self possessed at the beginning of a fight," writes one who has commanded men in battle. "As soon as the first shot is fired men become nervous and go into action with a calmness which is most impressive. High explosive shells, with their deafening noise, make the most impression on young and unseasoned soldiers, while sharpshooters affect the old soldiers the most. Those who imagine that it is possible to see a heroic look on men's faces at a decisive moment are completely mistaken. Their faces are pale and have a hard look about them. The struggle which is going on within them betrays itself by the nervous haste of their firing."

Henry E. Jones, of Tampa, Fla., writes: "I can thank God for my present health, due to Foley's Kidney Cure. I tried doctors and all kinds of kidney cures, but nothing did me much good till I took Foley's Kidney Cure. Four bottles cured me, and I have no more pain in my back and shoulders. I am 62 years old, and suffered long, but thanks to Foley's Kidney Cure. I am well and can walk and enjoy myself. It is a pleasure to recommend it to those needing a kidney medicine." Sold by Sturm & Wilson.

SWEET MELODY FLOUR.

Owing to the modus vivendi agreed upon between England and the United States, Newfoundland threatens to secede. In the face of this threatened catastrophe, England may yet have to borrow Secretary Taft for a few days.

Result of Neglect.
In most cases consumption results from a neglected or improperly treated cold. Foley's Honey and Tar cures the most obstinate coughs and prevents serious results. It costs you no more than the unknown preparations and you should insist upon having the genuine in the yellow package. Sold by Sturm & Wilson.

After awhile we will have a leisurely class of people in this country who made their fortunes by being political runners for William R. Hearst.

Foley's Kidney Cure will cure any case of kidney trouble that is not beyond medical aid. Sturm & Wilson.

A Soldier's Vindication

(Original.)
Bob Hazard was a good natured, devil may care sort of fellow, whom everybody loved. His hair was fair, his eyes were robin's egg blue, and he wore a perpetual smile on his lips. He looked so good that butter wouldn't melt in his mouth.

When the Spanish-American war broke out, Bob, who was a member of the national guard of his state, went with his regiment to Cuba and fought through the battles that resulted in the capture of Santiago. He seemed insensible to fear, and his companions said of him that he was too lazy to worry about getting shot.

Bob didn't get shot, but with that luck which comes to reckless people who rather deserve punishment he received a wound just severe enough to enable him to show the scars of a war veteran. A Mauser bullet went through the biceps of his right arm, giving what might pass for two wounds, one where it went in and one where it went out.

Hazard, not being able to handle a musket during this time, had abundant leisure for mischief. Removing two balls from cartridges, he sent one to his best girl, with a letter in which he said that to her and her alone he gave the Spanish bullet with which he had been shot. The other he sent to his other best girl, with a similar message. He enjoyed each to keep the secret of his preference, since he didn't wish to appear to attach any importance to his wound.

Now, the recipients, Miss Edith Spencer and Miss Della Marsh, were extremely feminine young ladies. While neither were in love with the young soldier, both were proud of the preference. Each knew that the other counted on Private Hazard as one of her special friends at the front. These exciting days when not to have an especial friend at the war was made a girl feel and appear like a "wall flower" at a ball. The next time Miss Spencer met Miss Marsh after the receipt of her bullet she asked, with a triumphant sparkle in the eye and toss of the head:

"Heard from Bob Hazard lately?"
The response was doubtless influenced by the questioner's manner. "Yes; the poor fellow has been severely wounded."

"I know," replied the other, with an air of superiority. "He wrote me all about it."

"So he did me, and sent me a keepsake."

"He sent me the bullet that struck him."

Miss Marsh gasped for breath. "I have that bullet," she said, "in my escarifice."

"And I have it in my jewel box." This was the preliminary part of a conversation that led to the exhibition of two bullets, each with a polished surface, which is never found on one that has been fired from a gun, to say nothing of being sent through a man's arm. Had the girls been disinterested they would have smiled. As it was, they vowed that when Private Hazard returned he should explain the strange proceeding and pronounce upon the genuineness of the ball that had wounded him.

When the war ended, it virtually began for Bob Hazard. An enemy awaited him which would have stricken terror into any man of less bravery. His regiment marched through the city from which it had departed with flying colors and martial music. The first communication he received after being mustered out was a note from Miss Spencer asking him to come and see how she had recovered the keepsake he had sent her. He called that evening and found Miss Spencer and Miss Marsh together. On the table was an open jewel box that had held a pair of solitary earrings, and in place of the earrings were two bullets. The expression on the faces of the girls was ominous.

"Will you please," said Miss Spencer, "tell us which of these two bullets wounded you?"

Bob looked at the laden missiles. Their polished surfaces should have brought the blush of shame to his face, but they did not. Indeed he took no note of anything. He was thinking how to wiggle out of the scrape he had brought upon himself. Finally, with an injured air he asked permission to take off his coat, which was granted. Removing the coat and a pair of gold sleeve links, he rolled up his shirt sleeve.

"This wound," he said, pointing to the scar where the missile that had really struck him on the inner surface of the arm, "was made by the bullet on the right. This," pointing to the scar where the original missile had left his arm, "was made by the bullet on the left."

The girls looked at each other. "You two young fellows," continued, "are special friends of mine. I thought might like to have a bullet that had struck a simple soldier of the Spanish war. Having a bullet for each wound, I was enabled to send one to each of you."

Again the girls looked at each other. "I told you," began Miss Spencer.

"And I told you," interrupted Miss Marsh, "that there was some."

"That you were very unjust."

"Do you mean," asked Miss Marsh, "that the soldier of the Spanish war at last, I should not have made so much of so trifling a matter?"

The victory was with the villain. Neither girl had loved him till his fraudulent vindication, his display of modesty. Then both loved him—while he—he loved them both.

SPENCER TROWBRIDGE.

CULINARY CONCEITS.

Boef or mutton rebeated in a double boiler is a vast improvement over the ordinary stew.
Bread which is to be kept long should be kneaded longer than that which is meant only for tomorrow's use.
If custard is cooked too long and curdles, take a bowlful of it at a time and beat with a patent egg beater until creamy.

If a little boiling water is added to the sweet milk used in making biscuits it will be found that less shortening is necessary and the result just as good.

Before frying them try dredging cold potatoes with flour and you will be pleased to discover that they will brown much more rapidly and be greatly improved in flavor as well.

If the fat in which foods are fried is overheated and allowed to burn they will become positively unwholesome, especially to people of delicate digestions, because of the chemical change which takes place in the fat.

A Welsh Rip.

Every nation has its Rip Van Winkle of its own, but the Welsh story of Rip is unique. He is known as Taffy ap Rhys. One morning Taffy heard a bird singing on a tree close by his path. Alarmed by the melody, he sat down under the music ceased. When he arose, what was his surprise at observing that the tree under which he had taken a seat had now become dead and withered. In the doorway of his home, which, to his amazement, had also suddenly grown older, he asked of a strange old man for his parents, whom he had left there as he said, a few minutes before. Upon learning his name the old man said: "Alas, Taffy, I have often heard my grandfather, your father, speak of you, and it was said you were under the power of the fairies and would not be released until the last sap of that yew-tree had dried up. Embrace me, my dear uncle, for you are my uncle—embrace your nephew." Well-meaning, do not always perceive the humor of this somewhat novel situation of a youth for Taffy was still merely a boy—being hailed as uncle by a gentleman perhaps forty years his senior.

For Far Him.

Askum—What was the man who stopped to talk to you? Dible.—What my old barber. Askum—Does he usually stop you on the street? Dible.—No, but he knows I'm shaving myself now and he just wanted to look at my face and float over me.—Atlanta Constitution.

Basilisks and Dragons.

One of the peculiarities of the ancient writers on natural history subjects was the implicit faith which they placed in the genuineness of the various basilisk and dragon stories which were told to them. Brunetto, for an instance to the point, relates with all soberness that "the basilisk is the king of serpents. He wears a white crest upon his head, and such is the abundance of his venom that the air is poisoned wherever this dire reptile passes. Trees in which he makes his home exhale such a poisonous odor that birds in flying over are so overcome with it that they fall to the ground dead."
"The dragon," says the same author, "is the very largest of serpents and inhabits especially India and Ethiopia. When he flies out of the caverns in which he makes his home he furrows the air with such violence as to make it gleam with fire. His mouth is small, and he has a powerful inflamer of deadly wounds with his teeth. In his tail, however, his power lies, and with it he can instantly strangle the largest elephant."

Don't Remain a Scoundrel.

I believe that I have met more unhappy, sickly women among dressmakers and seamstresses than in any other two trades put together. It takes a girl of exceptional will power and physical endurance not to degenerate physically and nervously in this trade. The close confinement, the cramped posture in which you work, the constant strain on eyes, first affect the appetite and then the general health. The girl beyond you cannot stand a draft, so the window is closed, and you get not a breath of God's pure air. The proprietor of the establishment can save rest by selecting a dull, electric lighted room, and so you are deprived of God's health giving sunlight. Do not go into a workroom unless you are firmly resolved to bend every energy to getting out of it again—that is, you must determine to learn as rapidly as possible and utilize the knowledge thus gained on broader lines than eight or ten hours spent under the dictation of a forewoman who will drag your bloodied feet to meet the exactions of a wealthy patron.—Anna Steese Richardson in Woman's Home Companion.
